

SOCIETY and PERSONAL ACTIVITIES of WOMEN

SOCIETY

The Current Events department of the Progress club met Monday afternoon at the clubhouse. Mrs. P. Ahrens and Mrs. R. T. Miller reviewed "The World's Work." During the business session which preceded the program, arrangements were made for a 1 o'clock luncheon to be given in the Rotary room of the Oliver hotel next Thursday afternoon to be followed by a theater party at the Oliver. Mrs. S. L. Moore assisted by Mrs. H. R. Jones and Mrs. H. Helman, served tea during the social interval. The next meeting will take place on the afternoon of Feb. 4, at which time "The Island of Yap" will be discussed by Mrs. E. C. Kline.

"Infinite variety of vegetation and glorious sunrises and sunsets are the chief charms of the sand dunes of Indiana," declared Mrs. Stella McGuire Rowley of Chicago, who presented last evening an illustrated lecture on "The Sand Dunes of Indiana," before 150 members and guests of the Business Women's Chamber of Commerce at the Chamber of Commerce building. Miss Miriam Dunbar, introduced the speaker of the evening. Preceding the lecture, dinner was served, during which a delightful musical program was rendered. David Conner, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Marnie Long, pianist, with two numbers, "Serenade" and "Souvenir" by Drula. A vocal selection, "Leave Me With a Smile," by Earl Burnett, was sung by Miss Irene Murray, accompanied by Mrs. Lang. The affair was in charge of the entertainment chairman, Miss Consuelo Leslie.

The members of the Delta Theta Tau sorority were entertained on Monday evening at the home of Miss Stephanie Gresh, Smith st., Mishawaka. After the regular business meeting, the evening was spent at games and luncheon was served to 12 members. The next meeting of the sorority will be held next Monday evening, the place to be announced later.

The members of the Novel club held their regular meeting Monday evening at the home of Miss Bess Staples, 816 N. Taylor st. Supper was served at 7 o'clock, the table being centered with a cluster of candles. Places were laid for Mrs. Lawrence Romine, Mrs. Gilbert Dunklin, Mrs. Horace Fox, Mrs. J. M. Stephenson, Mrs. Robert C. Shanks, Miss Harriet Stover, Miss Helen Herr and Miss Charlotte White. The next meeting will be held next week with Mrs. Gilbert Dunklin, 620 Park ave.

The Order of the Silver Sword met at the home of Miss Mary Bleuler Saturday evening. Two new members were admitted to membership. During the social hour, light refreshments were served. Miss Ruth Bahler, 921 Leland ave., will be hostess at the next meeting.

The marriage of Miss Ruby Korn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Korn and Earl Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Porter of Warren township, took place Saturday noon at the home of the bride's parents, eight miles northwest of the city. The ceremony was read by Rev. Earl F. Snyder of this city, before an improvised altar of greenery and roses. The couple was unattended. Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to the guests, who included only the members of the families. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Porter will reside for the present with the groom's parents.

The members of the Justamere club were entertained Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Wolf, 803 N. Allen st. The evening was spent playing 500, the favors being given to Mrs. L. Van Paris and C. M. Meyers. Luncheon was served following the game. The next meeting will be held Feb. 11 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Moon, 1733 Leer st.

Mrs. John Raab, 816 N. Michigan st., was surprised by a number of her friends Sunday evening, the occasion being the celebration of her birthday anniversary. At 500 the favors were won by Mrs. M. R. Wilder and M. H. Stroup. Luncheon was served late in the evening.

A Gold Thread Motif Lends Distinction to This Smart Black Broadcloth Suit.

Broadcloth is coming into its own again, and certainly nothing can be smarter for a winter suit for dress wear. The soft texture of the material makes it cling gracefully to the figure, and the rich simplicity of handsome broadcloth is unequalled in other materials. Black broadcloth, which is possibly more stunning than any color here depicted. The box coat is simple and perfectly plain. The straight skirt shows three pleats at either side, thus achieving fullness without added width. An odd motif worked in gold thread at one side of the skirt gives the smart suit an altogether distinctive finish. Black felt forms the big hat, its dull finish enlivened by shiny cire ribbon, which is pulled over the crown and extends off the left side in two stiff loops.

VERSE O' CHEER

By Edgar L. Jones

JUST A PUP.
He has scratched the floor an' scarred th' chairs an' torn the curtains down.
Th' tracks left by his muddy paws are scattered all aroun'.
He's chewed my shoes plumb full o' holes an' scattered 'em about.
He's worn the doors almost clean through a scratchin' to get out.
To romp and rip and tear around, the pesky little cuss.
It's always been his chief delight to git things in a muss.
His scars are found on every piece o' furniture we own.
An' sometimes our house looks as it some terrible cyclone.
Had made a call an' wrecked th' place before it went away.
Why ten kids couldn't make the mess that he makes in a day.
At night I have to hang my clothes away up overhead.
Or else I'll have to fish 'em out from underneath th' bed.
He got into my collar box an' ripped 'em one by one.
Till there was nuthin' left but strings, an' after that was done.
He pulled a cover off the bed and jerked it to and fro.
Until he had it full o' holes with nuthin' left to show.
What it had been. He sure has filled my old world full of care.
From havoc he was wrought from vandalism everywhere.
But the he's full o' mischief he has surely won my heart.
An' I would suffer more if he and I would have to part.
Than I have suffered in the past from mischief he's been in.
An' tho he tries my patience I just force myself to grin.
An' overlook as best I can, the things that he has done.
Because you see he's just a pup, and does it all in fun.
EDGAR L. JONES.

Revelations of A Wife

By ADELL GARRISON

Dr. Pettit started violently at my words, and repeated the name I had uttered.

"Grace Draper!" he said hoarsely, then cast a quick, apprehensive, protecting glance toward Claire Foster. It was the sort of mid-Victorian male attitude—I will let nothing—unseemly—come near you—thing—which, applied to the up-to-date, thoroughly sophisticated, western girl, made me smile to myself, even through my anxiety as to the physician's reaction to my news.

Then he turned to me with dignified sternness. "You have brought me here under a misapprehension, Mrs. Graham," he said. "I will not sit at dinner with Grace Draper, nor permit Miss Foster to do so. You will please excuse us."

He was turning away when I laid my hand lightly upon his sleeve. "Just a moment," I said silkily. "May I remind you that your only knowledge of Grace Draper has been gained through your office as a physician? Apart from that you know nothing of her. May I ask what reason you will give Miss Foster, or what explanation you imagine I shall give her if you do so outrageous a thing as betray a professional confidence? I certainly shall not permit her to go home unlightened."

"Are You Not Afraid?"
He started again and looked at my face searchingly. I knew that in his preposterous conceit he was afraid I might reveal to Claire Foster the history of his long and arduous devotion to me before he met her. And I am afraid I meant him to think precisely that very thing, impossible as the carrying out of my implied threat would have been.

Even his self-control could not hide the battle that followed between his fear of my revelation and his desire to leave. But fear finally conquered, and he replied grimly: "I am at your mercy, of course. But are you not afraid?"

Claire Foster's gay voice interrupted us with a merry sally, and from that moment until, having summoned Grace Draper from her room, we sat down to the prettily lighted table stationed in a screened wing of the veranda, looking out over a tiny moonlit lake, I had no time to think of my unfinished sentence. Then I acknowledged to myself that I was afraid, horribly so, of this experiment which brought Grace Draper back into our lives again.

But I was determined that no hint of my feeling should escape me, and for two hours, which seemed an eternity, I furnished the conversa-

SMALLPOX SCARE HEADED EASTWARD

By ADELL GARRISON

Dr. Bosenbury Advises Public to Vaccinate as Precaution Against Disease.

Cautioning residents of South Bend, Dr. C. S. Bosenbury, city health officer, sounded a warning to be prepared for smallpox. "Citizens may not be aware that a very malignant form of smallpox is prevalent in the west, especially Kansas City and other larger cities," said the doctor. "I would advise that those residents who have not been vaccinated in the last seven years be prepared for any invasion of this malignant type eastward."

Dr. Bosenbury called attention to the fact that four Kansas City men who came to Chicago each died of smallpox. The death rate is 35 percent for this form, the city health officer said.

He declared, however, that no immediate danger existed in South Bend and there was nothing that would tend to indicate even the trace of any epidemic.

YANKEES GO TO HOT SPRINGS.

PLATNER EATS ESKIMO SOUP.
They have a rumor around that one of his clerks named George Platner an Eskimo Pie the first day they were sold and George, seeing the chocolate, thought it a new candy and slipped it in his coat. When he came out of the Kiwanis meeting his overcoat pocket held soup. Get your pie there.

For the face? The words were almost a whisper. "Only for the flesh curves. They're just what your were. But that's absolutely all. I must have you for all the postures, and to wear the smart clothes."

"I'll be glad to help you in everything, even when helping you means keeping out of the picture," she returned with what was evidently an attempt at lightness. But she kept her face persistently in the shadow, and long after we had left her I wondered what had been in her eyes as she watched Dicky from that steady, masking shadow.
